ENGLISH TRAVELERS AND ITALIAN BRIGANDS. A NAME WATER OF CAPTURE AND CAPTURE. By W. J. C. MORNE. With a Map and several Illustrations. 12mo. pp. 330. Harper & Brebber.

Mr. Moens is an English gentleman who was cap tured by banditti in May, 1865, near the ruins of Pastum, in what was formerly the Kingdom of Naples, and was held by the robbers until the following August, when he was released on the payment of a ransom of $12,750. He was generally treated with kindness during his captivity, and though he suffered severely from hunger and cold, those were hardships of which the band bore their full share. An English elergyman named Aynsley, who was taken prisoner with Mr. Moens, was released and sent to get the ransom for himself and his companion. The robbers never rested long in any one spot, but were continually on the march among the moentains. They moved with the greatest cantion, two or three men in advance making frequent signals and uttering call-notes. When they approached a road they halted until they had satisfied themselves that the way was clear. The first night after his capture Mr. Moens was chliged to travel until nearly daybreak, when the whole party lay down to sleep by the side of a stream. In the morning all the bread was collected and divided into chares, the prisoners faring like the rest. It was so hard that it had to be soaked before it could be eaten. At 11 o'clock they moved again, and marched until they reached, about 4 o'clock, the summit of Moute Corvino, the highest eminence in the neighborhood, where the chief of the gang, a fine-looking fellow named Manzo, proceeded to fix the amount of their ransom. The sum demanded from Messrs. Moens and Aynsley was at first 50,000 dueats each, or $42,500; hat it was afterward reduced. Mr. Aynsley had scarcely departed to get the money when the brigands were overtaken by soldiers, and a sharp firing was kept up for a little while on both sides, in the course of which Mr. Moens was very near being killed. He was too closely watched, however, to take advantage of the confusion and make his escape; and was compelled to trudge on with his captors. After four days of terrible fatigue, hardship and hunger, the party reached the headquarters of the main body of the hand of which Manzo and his companions were merely a detachment. Here Mr. Moens found four women belonging to the gang. They were dressed just like the men, except that they wore corsets. Their hair was cut short, and two of them carried guns, the others being armed with revolvers. They received no share of the money which the bandittiobtained for ransoms, and their lot seemed to be, like that of too many other women, to mend their lord's clothes an with Mr. Moens, was released and sent to get the ransom for himself and his companion. The robbers bonest folks would have been charged, and our anthor declares his conviction that so long as the farmers and villagers have a strong pecuniary interest in the prevatence of brigandage the Government will never succeed in repressing such outrages as that from which he suffered. The proper course to pursue would be, in his opinion, to assess upon all the inhabitants of the district in which a capture takes place the sum gracted as a ransom. "If in addition to this," he says, "a court-martial were held on the spot on any one found with more bread on his person than a specified amount, say sufficient for his mid-day meal, and if, after a speedy trial, any one thus proved to have any dealings whatsoever with the brigands were hanged, excepting always any persons who may be rescuing one of their family from the brigands' hands, it would cause a state of fear among the peasants at least as great as that now excited by the brigands, and the peasants would soon betray the causes of this scourge of Southern Italy into the hands of the troops." This remedy would certainly be savage enough, but we may doubt whether after all it would be effectual. Even now the Government affixes such evere penalties to the crime of holding intercourse be effectual. Even now the Government anxes such severe penalties to the crime of holding intercourse with the robbers that great difficulty and delay was experienced in conveying to Manzo the sum demanded for Mr. Moens's ransom. Notwithstanding this the banditti are so hold in their operations that

"the proprietors dare not show their faces out of their houses, for they are carried off from the very villages houses, for they are carried off from the very villages should they venture to go a step from their own doors. All their lands are left to be cultivated by their laborers at their discretion, without ever being visited by the ewners; and subject to the rapacity of these peasants, the master gets a certain proportion of his own produce, the peasants bringing home just what pleases them and no more."

The reason arrived at last, and Mr. Moens joyfully them and no more."

The ransom arrived at last, and Mr. Moens joyfully bade his picturesque entertainers good-by. Before he beft they collected a sum of money to enable him to travel to Naples like a gentleman; the captain, Mauzo, gave him several gold rings; and another of the band presented him with a knife that had been the instrument of many a murderous deed. Two guides, one of whom was Manzo's mother (who seemed very proud of the generosity of her son in the matter of the rings), came to conduct him back to civilization. At parting, Manzo asked our author what he should say

My machiosh coat I put is my pocket, and, pefusing the wroffered kisses, shook hands all around with them, they parting with me in the me. "tendly way possible. Generoso added another to my stock of rings, making the finimher five.

I now steeped forward, accompanied by Tedesco and the mother of Manzo, all the brigands wishing me a pleasant journey, waving their arms to me while in sight. They were soon lost to view in the wood, and I walked on a free man, having been a captive in their hands 102 days, all which time I never entered any description of house, sleeping always in the open air on the hard ground!

"It was one of those fearfally hot days, when, in a southern clime, overything looks copper-colored, and when the slightest motion requires great exertion; but we had a long journey before us, and it was desirable to get to Giffoni before dark, so on we went in the broiling sun. I felt this very much, for when I was with the band I had never worked once in the sun. Walking in the daytime was only attempted when in a dense forest, where it was impossible for the rays of the sun to penetrate. Up hill and down dale we waked; it seemed so curious to be able to walk in so open a manner, and from habit I kept looking round to see if any one were watching our motions. Tedesco gave me a piece of checolate, which my late brother captive, Visconti, had kindly sent to me. He had often done so before, but the brigantsh had always eaten it, and never told one cave me a piece of chocolate, which my late brother captive, Visconti, had kindly sent to me. He had often done so before, but the brigands had always caten it, and never told me anything about it. Shirts, too, were sent up two or three times; but these in the same way, had never reached me, but were worn by the lucky men who fell in with the guides.

"I was in a desperate plight as regards dress; and, though I cared little about my appearance when in the woods, I did not quite like showing myself at Giffont. I had, however, to put on a good face, and make the best of it. My trowsers were all in tatters from catching in the brambles and busides, and hanging fin ribons at the feet. My cost was covered with the fat and grease of the meat that I had had to carry in the pocket, and all the lining of the skirts was torn to shreda, while constantly aleeping and lying on the dirty ground had quite changed the original color and pattern of the cloth. My wide awake was dirty and tom. My shirt I had worn day and night since the 19th of June; and my boots were all broken, and many of the seams unstitched. I am quite certain that none of my friends would have been able to recognize me; but I cheered myself with the news that a large warm bath would be ready for me on my appearance at Signor Visconti's house, where my friends had sent everything that I might require in the slape of dress.

"It is almost unnecessary to describe the state of my body. I was covered with sores from the effect of the vermin, through the brigands having steadily refused to allow me to remove my clothing for washing purposes, and never allowing me to stop at a stream for fear of the troops coming upon us before I could rearrange my dress.

In the appendix Mr. Moens gives a list of eight a stream for fear of the troops coming upon us before I could rearrange my dress.

In the appendix Mr. Moens gives a list of eight persons captured and held for ransom by the brigands of the province of Salerno during the year 1865. The whole sum paid for their release was about $100,000, and one of them, a calico-printer of Salerno, was still held prisoner, together with some of his employés, at the date of Mr. Moens's writing, a further sum of nearly $200,000 being demanded for his ransom. In the same year about 70 brigands were captured and tried in the provinces of Avellino and Salerno, many of them being shot, and 20 or 30 persons of some rank of them being shot, and 20 or 30 persons of some rank and importance, including doctors, priests and syndies, were arrested for holding communication with the band. Beside these over 1,500 peasants were arrested on a similar charge while Mr. Moens was in captivity.

THE NEW BOOK.

CHE PRAISE OF ZUIN, for Choirs, Singing Schools and Societies. By Solon Wilders and F. S. Davenfort. Price, $150 each; $1520 per dozen.

A new book, recently published, and its success justifies the very confident predictions in regard to it. A prominent issucher of missic writes thus respecting it: "To say that I like it would be too mild a phrase. Fam thoroughly and devidedly in love with it. Its harmonies are so unusual in a work of the class, and so rich and effective, that I have a real feast every time! I scent myself to an hour for its perusal."

The following are characteristics of this book: 1. Its music is fresh, original pepular, not meaningless on the one hand, nor too difficult on the other. 2. It has much variety, presenting for the first time original compositions by celebrated composers; as Clas Zenner, Novello, Neukoman, &c., &c. 3. It has a great amount of new masic. 4. It has a time watery of Tunes of all meters, as well as Anthems and Set Pieces, arranged as Choruses, and also with Nolos, Duets, &c. 5. It has a careful selection of the best old tunes from Carmina Sacra and other sources. 6. Its Sinding Schools music. Part-Songs, Olees, Rounds, &c. 8. The type is large and clear, one part on a staff. We are conditent that Singing Schools and Choirs who adopt "The Praise of Zion," will be pleased with?.

A MER. SCHOOL INST.," founded 1855,

A IS A RELIABLE EDUCATIONAL BUREAU:
(1.) To iti all who seek well-qualified teachers. Principals, School Officers and Heads of Families should send full particulars of what teachers they want, and sak for the "Teachers" Builetin." (2.) To represent educated teachers who desire positions. The demand for experienced teachers is good, especially for those who teach Classics, Military Tectics and Music. Professors of Music and superior Semale Music Teachers are always in demend. All teachers should have the "Application Form." (3.) To give parents information of good schools. Facts conserving schools are properly classified, and are promptly submitted to those who seek schools for their children and wards. The rectability of the "American School Institute" is amply vouched for by well-known educators and business men in all sections of the country. This testimony will be sent when desired.
